SpaNE Buildings Since 1945

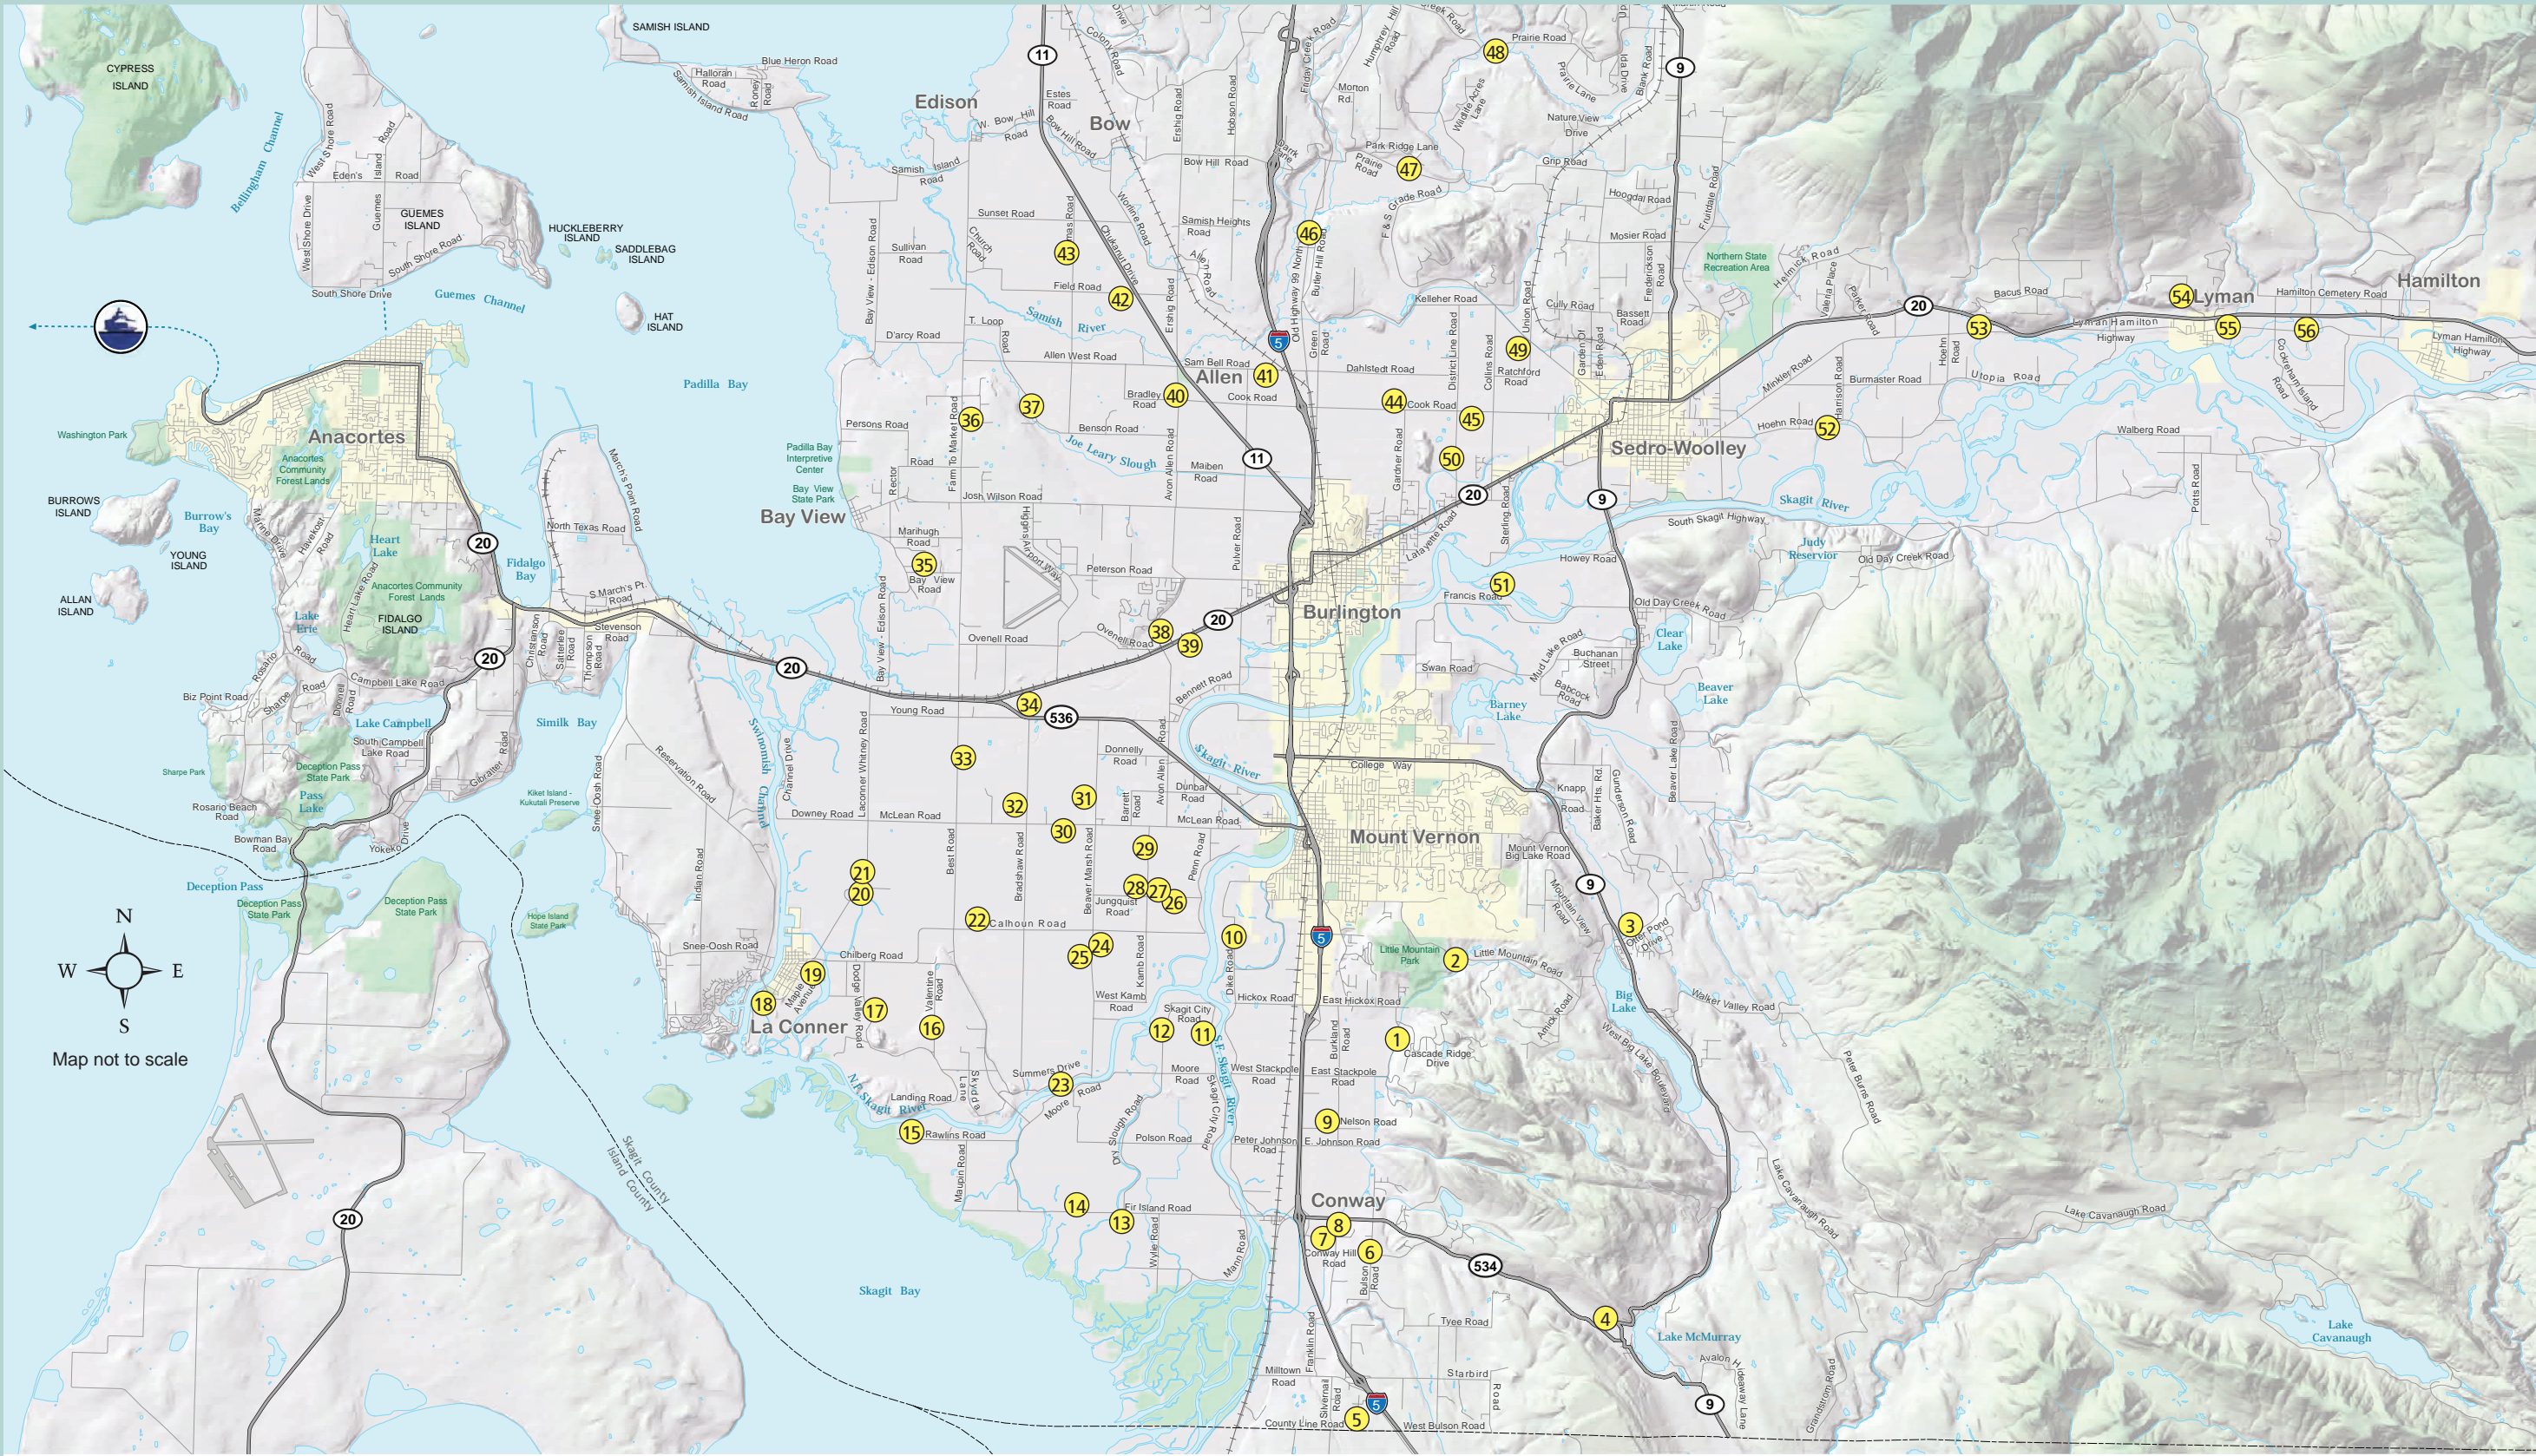

Welcome to SpaNE Buildings, where we've perfected the art of constructing pole barns and post frame buildings. Since 1945, SpaNE has been constructing some of the most distinguished horse arenas, private residences, commercial structures, barns and garages, throughout NW Washington. The first SpaNE Barn was built on Fir Island and can still be seen at what is presently the Folkertsma farm. Just look for the 'Uff Da' sign.

At SpaNE, we build more than structures; we build life-long relationships with our customers. Our exceptional craftsmen have built thousands of such structures, backed by our 100% workmanship guarantee.

We were recognized as the "2011 Builder of the Year" by our peers with the Skagit and Island Counties Builders Association (SICBA); a proud achievement in the SpaNE family.

Skagit County is proud to have 58 structures designated as "Heritage Barns".
We hope you enjoy viewing these barns and learning more about their past.

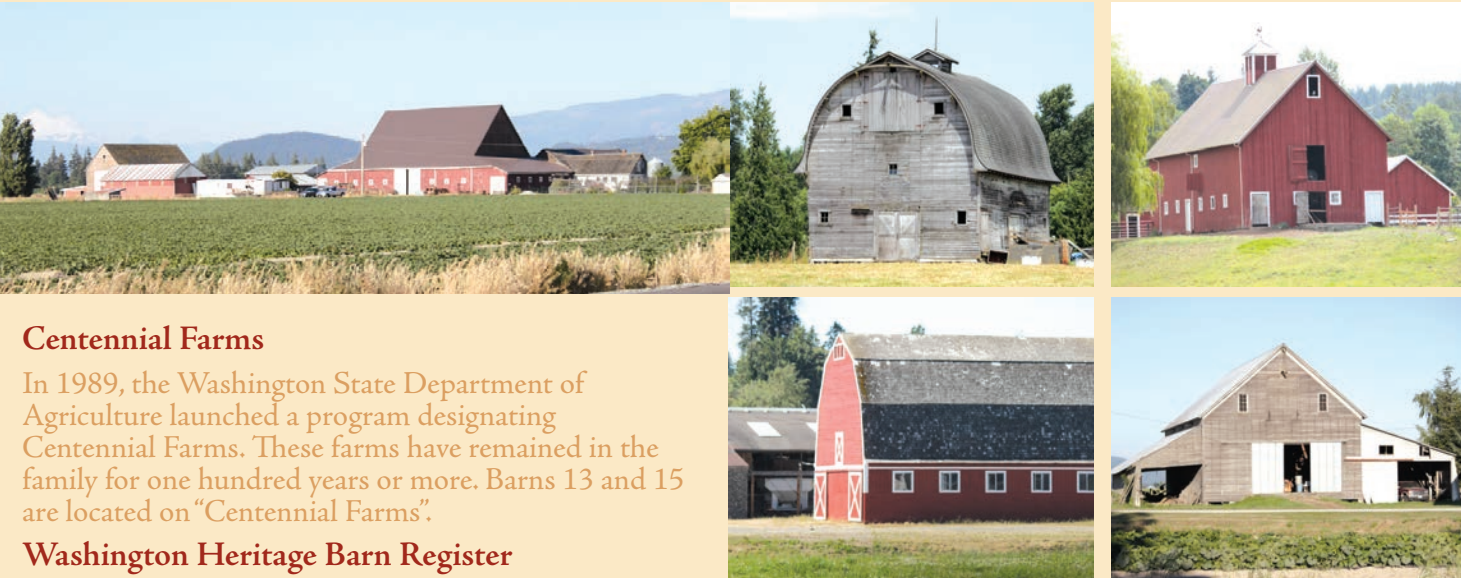

Here are some helpful tips to make your Barn Map experience more enjoyable:

- The photos of the barns are from the public right of way. There are three barns – #4, #16 and #29 - that are not visible from the roadway. We have provided photos of these barns, but please do not attempt to access them. Please be respectful of private property. Interior access to the barns is not available.
- The barns are scattered across the county, so following the map 1 to 58 may not be the best route. We suggest taking the barns in zones and enjoy them by area.
- Many of the barns are in remote parts of the County, so your cell phone and internet services may not work in all areas.
- The map is not meant to be a 'road map'. It is to provide designations for each barn and get you in the vicinity. The map is not exactly to scale, so we suggest using either a GPS to locate, or a detailed road map of the County.
- As you travel around the County, you may notice other amazing barns that aren't included in the map. The map lists the 58 barns that have been designated Heritage Barns. Hopefully more barns will be added to this list, so the wonderful structures can be protected and preserved. Enjoy the additional bonus sights!
- Every effort has been made to ensure the accuracy of the material herein; the Historical Museum and its agents assume no responsibility or liability of errors, changes or omissions to this map.

HERITAGE BARNs OF SKAGIT COUNTY

Centennial Farms
In 1989, the Washington State Department of Agriculture launched a program designating Centennial Farms. These farms have remained in the family for one hundred years or more. Barns 13 and 15 are located on "Centennial Farms".

Washington Heritage Barn Register
Created with the passage of Substitute HB 2115 in May of 2007, the Washington Heritage Barn Register commemorates barns as historically significant resources representing the agricultural, economic and cultural development of the State of Washington. To be eligible for listing in the new Heritage Barn Register, barns must be over 50 years old and retain a significant degree of historic and architectural integrity. Owners interested in seeking designation for their historic barns are asked to complete a nomination form and provide basic information about the property. A total of 58 barns in Skagit County have been designated Heritage Barns. They are featured in this brochure. For more information about the Heritage Barn program go to www.dahp.wa.gov
